RAISE A GLASS TO FALLEN KINGS

Sancerre, Aquitar.

The first cask of Brandy de Bore, was opened and shared with dignitaries last night at the funeral of Emperor Moleon II, the founder of the distillery where the liquor was made. In honor of his late majesty, and in celebration of the peace formed by his son, Charles de Bore, Moleon III, with Mare-Civitas and the Vandalands, Brandy de Bore is now available for sale to all citizens. It was Moleon II's last wish that all his citizens might raise a glass to him and the first Moleon, who freed the Aquitarans from the tyrannical rule of Shrouis XVI.

XALAPÉNAN COLONY RECLAMATION

Fort-de-Aquitar, Antilles.

Generalissimo Antonio de Xalapéna begins facing the full force of Aquitar this week for committing war crimes against Aquitaran citizens. During the recent struggles with Mare-Civitas and Vandalands, many outlying colonies were seized by the Xalapéna government. Emperor Moleon III began sending forces to reclaim stolen lands at the behest of the Marquis of Bayou and the Marquis of Aquitaran Antilles. Reports from within the contested areas of Vespuccia seem to indicate the enslavement of Colonials for the purposes of mining and war construction. Naval forces attacked the colonial prefecture of the Antilles, Fort-de-Aquitar, and with that foothold, plans are set to assault the mainland within days.

NEW NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Palisade, Aquitar.

Reformed by Emperor Moleon III, the new democratic branch of the Aquitaran government began it's first session yesterday. Both Legislatures, the Peerage of Counts and Marches of Marquis, Have a vote equal to the Emperor in all matters of state. The inclusion of an independent legislature for colonial marquis has proven an great incentive to many territories that had previously seceded. Despite widening Aquitar's power base, the provision of equal power for colonies has upset many of the Peerage. The sound of raised voices once again echoes through the halls of the Assembly.

NEXT CAPER OF ARSENE LEBLANC

Palisade, Aquitar.

Is the Musee de Moleon the next target of famous thief Arsene Leblanc? Messages sent to Palisade police have supposedly left a cryptic message indicating either the theft of precious items within the museum or perhaps even the museum itself! We all remember the thefts committed last year by the rogue Leblanc, and the chase he led the police on across half of Aquitar.
